Jilmary, licensed PT and professor at UCSD, is working with PT students on a slow patient day in the capital. If patients don't come in, we create learning opportunities among each other. Jilmary is the primary clinical instructor and I started to assist her in the fall of 2010.

Jilmary and Cathy with some of the PT students last fall. Some are finishing their second and others their third clinical rotations. They represent ADR clinics in Santo Domingo, Salcedo, San Francisco de Macoris and San Pedro de Macoris.

Kendall working with one of his patients in the parallel bars which had to be housed in the hallway for a couple of years. Kendall was an up and coming therapist when he tragically drowned in a river. We will miss his dedication, gentleness, kindness, laugh and smile for years to come but were blessed to have his friendship while he was here on this earth. Until we meet again, Kendall!!

Blessing of the palms on Palm Sunday. We are in front of Lila's house in the sector Canta Rana of Santa Fe. Ramona is doing the reading, Fr. Felix is to the right of her and Magalis has the cross. From there we walked around Canta Rana and Cascarajicaras singing songs of praise to our Lord before entering the church for worship.

We've arrived at church and you can see the joy and enthusiasm which fills our congregation. Juanito, the man in the green striped shirt, has brought many men into our congregation through his gentle but faithful evangelism!

The welcome roundabout in San Pedro de Macoris, with the ever present motorcycles passing by.

One of the places that I go to for exercise, the complejo, has others there in the morning walking the track. There are always some youth training for baseball with dreams of getting signed.

The flea market (mercado de pulga) outside the complejo on the weekends. I go past this anytime I head to town.
