

Staff and students in the Capital are working on exercises on a rainy day with few patients coming to the clinic through the poorly draining streets.

Some of the Rehabilitation staff in San Pedro is celebrating Mother's Day, which in the Dominican Republic is the last Sunday in May.

Cathy is working with DPT students from Regis University on a special clinical opportunity and a couple of young patients with head injuries.

Kendall is arranging the gifts presented on Harvest Sunday in December. Some of the products you see are coconuts, plantains, sour oranges, grapefruit, eggplant, potatoes, and more.

Ramona is selling the produce after the service to raise money for our Diocesan pledge.

Fruit stands line the streets from October to December with special fruits such as apples, pears and grapes along with the more common papaya, pineapple, bananas and oranges.

This is one of the statues at the roundabout, featured in Photos 1, at the entrance to San Pedro. In case you hadn't heard, the Dominicans are rather interested in baseball and a player by the name of Sammy Sosa hails from the San Pedro area, along with others in the MLB.

