Some of the students from this fall working on a presentation to give the other clinical level students. I gave the initial presentation with basics of mobilizations. They are learning how to do joint mobilizations which requires a good awareness of structural anatomy.

Four of the five students who are finishing their clinical rotations this fall term. Nurys, Angelina, Idelsa and Mairobi are celebrating the conclusion of this part of their studies. They started their education in the fall of 2004 or winter 2005 and have their thesis yet to complete before graduating.

This is lab time in the Tests and Measures II class at the university where I've been helping. We were able to set up three groups of 8 to be practicing, whereas with the professor alone, they would have all been in one group.

The Clinica Esperanza y Caridad as well as the Asociacion Dominicana de Rehabilitacion Filial San Pedro de Macoris are celebrating 13 years of service to the community of San Pedro. It has not always been a smooth journey but both clinics have continuously grown to better meet the needs of the community. We always have devotionals as a clinic Wednesday mornings and this particular morning, we had an extra special one for the anniversary.

Above is one of the staff members singing to start off the service. The door behind the guitarist is the main physical therapy door. To the left is the group in attendance in our parking area.

Arriving at the ADR in the capital the day after Thanksgiving I was greeted by this sign on an appliance store nearby.

That same day the ADR was having their annual bazaar to raise funds. There is a lovely courtyard area on the facility grounds in which numerous stands were set up. One of the offerings was coffee. Not being a coffee drinker, I didn't partake, but did have to think of my friends who love their coffee in their large mugs. This size cup is pretty standard for serving coffee, (if not a bit larger) in homes or on the street for your morning coffee jolt! I'm not sure how many sips one gets out of these, but I'm guessing fewer than what most Americans are used to!
