

Photos 2017

Last Spring, I participated with a training session for the teachers of a week-long wheelchair training camp. Here Diosa is being coached by the expert in how to pop up a curb with the best technique. In the background is the stair and ramp set for training.

Students from my summer class of neuroscience are studying the model of the brain, trying to identify different areas and structures.

Students practicing the test for proprioception on one another.

Students practicing the 4 square test along with other functional tests.

Students practicing balancing on 2 points in the wheelchair, which can be a bit startling the first time you try it.

Las Chicas Nice chorus before the 2017 Episcopofest concert, missing our fearless leader Iris, who was visiting family in the US.

2017 saw the retirement of Bishop Julio Cesar Holguin, after leading the diocese of the Dominican Republic for over 25 years.

September was a hectic hurricane month for the area, but we escaped with lots of rain and a few downed trees. This is the view from my roof the morning after Maria departed our area.

The Episcopal school in my town lost 7 trees from Hurricane Maria.

This is the construction ministry working on the floor of Evelin's house. Her house was finished before the severe storms and served as refuge for her extended family.

